

Develop your interests and independent learning skills by reading around your subject.

Find out what specific skills you need to do well in Geography and revise each of your units.

Look out for your unit resource guides on the College website featuring your journal, Geography Review.

All of these resources can be borrowed from the Library. Search your Online Library Catalogue to find even more for geography, study skills, careers, wellbeing and fiction.

IF YOU WOULD LIKE ANY HELP FINDING OR USING YOUR RESOURCES, JUST ASK RACHEL

Exam Technique and Cross-Unit Revision

Making the grade: question and answer: what are exams for anyway? This article provides an explanation of what A-level geography exams are trying to do. September 2022.

Making connections: changing places, global systems and Covid-19. Explores changes in local place identities and experiences linked with the spread of Covid-19 through global systems. April 2021.

Understanding and interpreting graphs. Graphs are a common data-stimulus resource. You need to be confident in interpreting and responding to graphs in order to maximise your marks. February 2021.

Challenging your world view: how to develop your critical thinking. Everything in the world is getting worse. Right? See why the answer to this question is complicated and how you can think more critically. November 2020.

Extended writing: ten tips for quality answers. How you can write answers that will gain you those marks. April 2019.

Making connections: landscapes, climate and disease. Looks at some of the connections between landscapes, climate and the incidence of disease. November 2019.

Why have I been given this? Ten ways to improve data interpretation. This looks at ways to improve your interpretation skills and write answers that maximise your marks. November 2019.

Making connections: hazard and place. The links between hazardous events and the places they affect are common features in exam questions. September 2019.

What is a geographical enquiry? The NEA is an integral part of the assessment. This gives guidance about the nature of geographical enquiry and what it will involve. September 2016.

Making the grade: question and answer: understanding the Assessment Objectives. February 2017.

Find the latest issue of Geography Review on the journals spinner and past issues shelved with the geography books.